

Frequently asked questions

What if the outcome areas change as a result of feedback on the new National Disability Strategy Position Paper?

The department is currently considering Stage 2 consultation feedback on the new NDS Position Paper. Any changes to outcome areas that arise from this feedback will be reflected in the NDS and NDIS Outcomes Frameworks proposed in the Introductory Paper. This will ensure the Outcomes Frameworks measure and report outcomes that matter most for people with disability and track the effectiveness of the new NDS and NDIS.

Will there be other engagement to supplement the online engagement on National Disability Strategy and National Disability Insurance Scheme Outcomes Framework?

Yes. In addition to seeking responses to the Introductory Paper, we are also holding workshops and roundtable consultations with disability sector stakeholders, such as Disability Representative Organisations, peak bodies and academics. These consultations are technical in nature and focus on validating the logic of the Outcomes Frameworks and consideration of indicators and measures.

Public consultation on the Outcomes Frameworks Introductory Paper will help us gather information from the broader community and has a focus on what is important to people with disability in achieving desired outcomes under the new NDS.

We will use the workshop, roundtable and data from the public consultation to inform the development of the NDS and NDIS Outcomes Frameworks.
